Expert Advice

DECEMBER

Associate Member since April 2018

We developed programs to increase total staff and customer awareness and promote cost saving culture that eliminates waste in matters of time, effort and resources without compromising the service level of Facilities Management. We believe that small things added together can create a significant impact that adds value to Facilities Management.

Master's Degree Engineering Management

Successfully acquiring a master's degree in Engineering management hones his capability and be at the best of what he enjoyed doing. Facilities Management which encompasses this degree, has been instrumental in earning the top level management position in a Government institution and is something he could truly be proud of.

Networking event that was recently sponsored by his organization and was participated by various Company's and other organization as well. Definitely, this will be rippled through other means like trainings, seminars and conferences. One way to reflect their knowledge and work to the general public is to increase awareness on how to conserve energy, water and waste segregation and recycling.
